

MJ Hibbett & The Validators – Theme From Dinosaur Planet

MJ Hibbett & The Validators, the band who invented the free download single and viral video, are going back to their roots today with the title track from their new science fiction rock opera concept album.

Theme From Dinosaur Planet is available to download for free right now at <http://www.dinosaurplanet.co.uk> with a fantastic accompanying video. It's the lead track from their forthcoming album Dinosaur Planet, a full cast rock opera based on MJ Hibbett's acclaimed Fringe Show, which tells the terrifying story of what happens the day the dinosaurs return from space.

"It's like a cross between The Hitchhiker's Guide To The Galaxy and Giant Steps by The Boo Radleys," says MJ Hibbett. "Or an indie War Of The Worlds."

In October 1999 MJ Hibbett and the Validators released the first ever free download single, Hey Hey 16K. Four years later b3ta's Rob Manuel made a flash animation for the song and turned it into one of the first ever virals videos, before YouTube had even been invented. It had two million hits in its first fortnight and has continued to be hugely popular ever since.

The video for Theme From Dinosaur Planet features artwork by John Allison, the brains behind one of the most popular internet comic strips, scaryground.com. He's designed all the visuals for the album, including t-shirts which will be available when the album is released later this year.
